What is ACCA?

ACCA - The UK

The Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA), established in the U.K. in 1904, is a globally recognized professional accounting body offering the prestigious Chartered Certified Accountant qualification. With over 250,000 members and 526,000 students across more than 180 countries, ACCA is considered the largest professional accounting organisation worldwide. This qualification is on a par with International Federation of Accountants (IFAC) standards, in consonance with international accounting and auditing principles.

In India, ACCA professionals play a key role in areas such as auditing and assurance, financial accounting and reporting, and taxation for international clients. They often work with global companies such as PwC, KPMG, Deloitte, EY, Grant Thornton, BDO, and other multinational corporations.

ACCA in INDIA

ACCA qualified personnel are in high demand in India as India's economy continues to grow in sync with global economy and the corporates scouting for best talents avidly lap up these candidates with exemplary skills. The recent survey of the prevailing trends in higher education in India, show higher enrolment rate of Indian students in the ACCA course than any other comparable course. As there is a huge demand for ACCA graduates in the MNCs, students are able to secure placement in those companies even before they qualify for a B.com Degree. It can, therefore, be inferred that the possibility of immediate placement has triggered this enthusiasm of thousands of candidates to enrol in ACCA, one of the most sought-after programs in India.

As India continues to emerge as a hub for outsourced financial services, the contribution of ACCA professionals in managing tax filings, maintaining accounts, auditing financial statements, and delivering business services to foreign clients has become inestimable.
